

The Warrior Quarterly(ish) Education Newsletter, 2013-2014

In late 2012, I was offered the opportunity of resurrecting and revising the WWCC Education Department newsletter, The Warrior (school mascot). With reporting from other students and a dip into my collection of quotes and creativity, the newsletter went from a three page afterthought to a 10-12 page extravaganza of educational news, advice, and celebrations of student accomplishments. Below are the covers of three issues.

Educational Posters

Each term, the WWCC Education Department required new, often seasonal-themed posters, for each of the 8-10 courses offered at the North Campus. The following are three of my favorites.

First, a Graphic design poster for the 2012 Fall term, using Photoshop stroke options to create some interesting text backdrops.

I know, I said three, but this one was fun to put together.

The intent was to emulate the little poorly-printed ads that used to fill the back pages of magazines. This design and the various calls to action relied heavily on the graphic design of Morning Breath, Inc.

Another Graphic Design Teacher's Aide task was the design of graduation day pamphlets, which I gladly created, using the school colors and countless Photoshop effects.
